Passage 1

A class with hundreds or even thousands of students might sound like a teacher's worst nightmare. But a big idea in higher education these days is Massive Open Online Courses, or MOOCs.

Some universities offer free, non-credit MOOCs available to anyone in the world. Others charge for courses and provide credits. The idea is still developing. The Massachusetts Institute of Technology started its first MOOC in 2012. The school plans to offer many free, non-credit courses through a project called MITx. Many Chinese universities are beginning to offer free MOOCs now too.

Nowadays, MOOCs almost cover every topic, like computer science, technology, mechanics, engineering, languages, etc.

Generally speaking, there are no formal education requirements for these free online courses. Students watch short videos. Then, they take informal, ungraded quizzes after the videos each week for certain weeks. Quizzes are part of the lecture program to keep students engaged and keep them thinking, for students to be able to check that they understood what was covered. They can repeatedly watch the videos and take the quizzes whenever they want. Students receive homework. They can join online groups to exchange questions and answers about the courses. The teachers hold virtual office hours to answer questions that the students have posted. They also present their own questions and observations.

Some supporters claimed that there are things that we can do better in the online format. We can certainly deliver high-quality education to many students at much lower cost.

21. _____ started its first MOOC in 2012.
- A. The Massachusetts Institute of Technology
 - B. Harvard University
 - C. A Chinese university

22. Which is not true about the free online courses?
- A. Students can watch short videos.
 - B. Students may ask the teachers some questions.
 - C. Students must take graded quizzes.
23. They can join online groups _____.
- A. to discuss the quizzes
 - B. to exchange questions and answers
 - C. to present their observations
24. The teachers hold _____ to answer questions that the students have posted.
- A. virtual office hours
 - B. face-to-face meetings
 - C. regular seminars
25. What is the attitude of the writer to online courses?
- A. neutral
 - B. negative
 - C. positive

26—30 题:根据短文内容判断给出的语句是否正确,正确的写“T”,错误的写“F”,并将答案写在答题纸上。

Passage 2

The term “lifelong learning” is very popular nowadays. It describes the need for people to continue their education and training throughout their lives. Lifelong learning is more and more important for everyone because people are now facing different career choices in changing economies. It is believed lifelong learning is a crucial response to the challenges of the global knowledge economy.

Currently, most universities have reacted to the era of lifelong learning by adding new programs and services for adults who seek to combine employment with part-time study. Special arrangements have been developed for these students but the core activity of the university, providing teaching to full-time young undergraduates, often goes on much as before.

Lifelong learning is both formal and non-formal; and the boundaries between face-to-face teaching and distance education are increasingly blurred.

By making learning possible anytime and anywhere, distance education is a powerful tool for supporting lifelong learning. Technology-based teaching is creating new educational systems that anyone from anywhere can access. The key challenge for universities is to evolve from a teacher-centered model of education to student-centered model. The challenge for governments is that they have to develop new funding approaches and new quality assessment procedures.

26. The term “lifelong learning” describes the need for people to continue their education and training in a certain period of their lives.

27. The challenges of the global knowledge economy bring the needs for lifelong learning.

28. Lifelong learning is non-formal.

29. The universities should make the classroom student-centered.

30. To develop a new quality assessment system is a challenge for the government.
